DEVELOP A WILMINGTON COMMUNITY COURT Issue: Low level offenders are often penalized with fees that they cannot pay, or with short-term incarceration for petty crimes. This can lead to issuance of capias and, in turn, further involvement in the criminal justice system. Short term incarceration can further destabilize low level offenders due to job loss and family issues. Incarceration and fees do not help the offender resolve whatever issues have led them to these violations and offenses. Objective: The Community Court is a type of problem-solving court that addresses low-level crimes, public safety and quality of life issues at the neighborhood level. The focus of community courts is not isolated to a particular problem like the Drug Court or Mental Health Court, but rather to address multiple needs of a particular geographic area. Community court programs are focused on improving outcomes for the offender and reducing recidivism by addressing factors such as substance use, mental health and unemployment that are generally linked to criminal behavior.¹ The Community Court provides accountability to offenders by ensuring they give back to their communities through various community service initiatives. The Community Court is planned to have a rotating calendar by Wilmington neighborhood; the neighborhoods can discuss the current interests and concerns that affect their community. IMPROVED ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURES Issue: There are organizations and programs in various departments that may be a better fit elsewhere. For example, there are numerous advocacy or monitoring agencies within the Judicial Branch and the Department of Safety and Homeland Security which are not necessarily cohesive with their core missions (e.g., Non-Judicial agencies within the Courts, and disability organizations within DSHS). Another example is the DUI Provider Program within the Office of Highway Safety, DSHS, also referred to as the Delaware Evaluation and Referral Program or DERP. OHS has overseen this statutorily-mandated program for approximately 30 years (21 Del. C. § 4177D). At that time, the Department of Safety and Homeland Security was called the Department of Public Safety, which included the DMV. Over time, however, not only have there been structural changes to the department, but the OHS has been having to oversee and sometimes intervene in clinical issues, for which they do not have expertise or education. Initiative: Finding appropriate homes for Non-Judicial agencies, where they can strongly advocate for their clients and their own operations, and in which they are not competing with the Judicial Branch’s core missions. The Judicial Branch has no ability to provide proper oversight of these agencies with the current level of staffing, or without creating additional conflicts. The Delaware Evaluation and Referral Program (DERP) should be relocated. Though at one time it was considered a conflict for DHSS to oversee the program, there is now agreement that no such conflict exists. DHSS also has expertise in these areas, and already oversees most of these treatment agencies currently.
